

Thriving and Surviving as an Assistant Professor: Developing a research agenda, developing collaborative relationships, balancing teaching and research.

From AERI 2011

The purpose of this workshop is to discuss the broad range of opportunities and obstacles faced throughout the journey towards tenure. In the first half of the workshop, participants will discuss the general issues faced in the role as assistant professor and establish strategies that can be used by individuals as they journey toward tenure. The second half of the workshop will focus on individual research agendas. Participants will break into small groups and share the broad outlines of their research agenda in order to solicit feedback from other group members on the potentials and pitfalls that may exist. A final discussion will wrap up the workshop that highlights peer-to-peer support.

Participants are asked to bring an outline of their research agenda with them for discussion.

Retrieved from "<http://gslis.simmons.edu/wikis/aeri2011>

/Thriving\_and\_Surviving\_as\_an\_Assistant\_Professor:\_Developing\_a\_research\_agenda,\_developing\_collaborative\_relationships,\_balancing\_teaching\_and\_research."

- This page was last modified on 29 June 2011, at 14:24.